

Mao on General Strike and Insurrectional Strike – In the Present, arguments on Sylvain Lazarus and Anthropology of the Name with Sirohi (1921, 2024)

By Mao Zedong

- I. How to produce a correct mass line after divisions among the working class – Mao on General Strike and Insurrection (1921)

I have produced the line of the party – I approached the peasant class called for a strike which became a jacquerie and in that period asked for the party CPC in the Shanghai region to set of a general strike call in line with the peasantry. The reason this spring thunder works is because the praxis is then a set off, in the Trotskyist sense of an axis influencing the spontaneity – the workers I believed all made a run. I call this a style – running for freedom.

- II. Anthropology of the name with Sirohi – Against Class Consciousness and TUs – Instead a Insurrectional strike as Line. (2024)

The fused noyeaux within the working class should not listen to TUs, should simply call a assembly of workers and present the party line – insurrectional strike okay. And this would in fact set of an insurrectional strike – imagine the Renault strike in Paris in 2004 he argues, not as simple leaving of the job and permanent post prestige and lay-offs and lock-outs – but in fact a withdrawal with insurrectional strike line active, that it simply assembles all workers to the site which then lapses that evening with all workers going for work again.
